DON’T PANIC: Talking with Your High Schooler about Healthy Relationships and Sexuality
Welcome to this Guide!

We know that talking about sex and relationships can be uncomfortable and intimidating. At JCFS Response for Teens we believe that an open attitude about human sexuality sets the stage for healthy relationships and sexual expression.

We hope this guide will provide you with some basic information and simple tools so that you can provide your child with information that expresses your family’s values and helps them make healthy choices and to have healthy, loving, and satisfying relationships in their future.

MYTH: If parents/caregivers talk about sex and relationships with their young people, it will lead to their teens engaging in sexual activity at an early age.

REALITY: Research suggests that teens who report talking with their parents/caregivers about sex are more likely to delay having sex and to use condoms when they do have sex.

MYTH: All young people dread talking to their parents/caregivers about sex and relationships.

REALITY: You are more influential in your young people’s lives than you realize. They need your guidance to sort through the mixed messages they get from pop culture and their friends.

Communicating with your young person about sex and relationships shouldn’t be one, big dreaded “The Talk.” Instead, we encourage you to have many small conversations as a way of engaging your young person and showing them that you care. This can keep the door open for them to come to you as they grapple with new experiences.

INCLUSIVE LANGUAGE

Response for Teens believes that people of all identities need and deserve sexual health education that reflects them. Language is an important tool for keeping the door to communication open between you and your child. Young people of all identities need to see themselves reflected in discussions about sexual health and relationships. “Inclusive language” means that we will refer to people in ways that don’t leave anyone out. For example, we talk about people with vulvas and ovaries, and people with penises and testicles. You may choose to use male/female, but remember to keep an open mind about your own child. By using the inclusive language modeled in this guide, you will be affirming and supporting your child in who they are. Your acceptance will help them make healthier choices.

ACCURATE TERMINOLOGY

When we use made-up names or slang terms for anatomy, we send the message that these parts of our bodies are shameful or embarrassing. By using accurate language to describe anatomy and sexual acts, Response for Teens hopes to help you take the shame and secrecy out of talking about sexual health.

You are your child’s most important teacher. While we encourage you to use this guide, we also hope that you infuse it with your family and cultural values.

Each section of this guide will provide you with concrete information—What to Know—and some tips on What to Do/Starting the Conversation with your High Schooler. Hyperlinks within the pages will bring you to resources in English; on the Resources page you will find resources in your language.
Talking about Sex with Your Young Person

Many parents dread having to talk about sex and relationships but talking about these aspects of health are important throughout your child’s life. Other parts of this guide address specific elements of sexual health and relationships but here are some general tips for using teachable moments to get started with your child.

HOW TO START THE CONVERSATION

• Be prepared. We have provided a list of resources— websites, books and videos that will strengthen your knowledge and support these conversations.

• You do not have to be an expert. If you don’t know the answer to something, don’t be afraid to admit it!

• LISTEN to what your child has to say. Make sure your body language shows you are open.

• Be curious. “I’m wondering what have you heard about…?” or, “Would you like to know about…..?”

• S.O.Y. is a great way to begin a conversation. “Some teens might be having sex. Others may not. You might be figuring out what you feel comfortable with.”

• Think about your values. What’s important to you? Love, kindness, listening, planning for the future? How do these beliefs translate into relationships and sexuality?

• Find Moments in the Margins. TV, magazines, social media, and the news provide regular opportunities to start conversations about difficult topics with your children. You can ask:

  • “What would you do if someone you were dating started acting like that character on this TV show?” or
  • What do you think about…?

THINGS TO REMEMBER

• Avoid scare tactics. Emphasize the importance of using protection to stay safe and care for the safety of their partner.

• Be sure to include the positive elements of sex – pleasure and connection – while you focus on consent.

• Your young person may not want to engage. That’s OK! The more you’re willing to talk about sex and relationships, the more likely they’ll come to you when they need to.

• If your young person identifies as LGBTQ+ they may be confused or be afraid to talk to you about it. Fully support them educate yourself as best you can.

• They might ask you. Don’t jump to conclusions about why they’re asking. Keep your answers simple and explain new words that they might not know.

• Don’t make assumptions about your child’s romantic or sexual interests. They may be very far from interest in sex and dating, or closer than you think. They may not know what kind of person they’re attracted to or if they’re attracted to any kind of person at all, so use inclusive language as often as possible.

• Challenge the media! A report from the National Center for Health Statistics found that only about half of U.S. teens have had sex by age 18. But TV, movies, and social media make it seem like every teen is ready to have sex. Share this information with your child when you watch a tv show or hear a lyric in a song.

A SPECIAL NOTE ON PORNOGRAPHY

Pornography isn’t real sex. Many young people will see it—whether by accident or by seeking it out—and it can give a false, and sometimes disturbing idea of how people have sex. It is essential to talk about pornography so you can make sure that it doesn’t have negative consequences for your child’s future relationships.

WHAT TO DO:

• Open with curiosity: Have you ever seen pornography online or from friends?

• If they’ve seen porn, ask them if there’s anything they are curious about or anything that was confusing.

• Porn is full of misinformation – about how real people look and what they do. Be prepared to explain how it is different from real sex and relationships.

• Compare it to something they might understand – you do not learn to drive from watching Fast & Furious; you should not try to learn about sex from watching porn.
What You Might See/Hear

• Continued physical growth and change.
• More time spending with friends.
• More self-consciousness.
• More privacy-seeking.
• More physical appearance seeking.
• More positive body image.
• More intimate sexual behaviors.
• Greater emphasis on romantic and sexual relationships.

What You Can Do/Starting the Conversation

• Support your young person.
• Give them books and materials.
• Have open discussions about their values.
• Help them to focus on what they can do, not just how they look.
• Acknowledge peer pressure and media use.
• Communicate about internet and social media use.
• Encourage your teen to problem solve.
• Help them to disagree with you but remain respectful.
• Give them books and materials.
• See if they have any questions.
• Include all possible relationship pairings.
• Create opportunities for privacy.
• Discuss what makes a relationship healthy and what does not.
• Use goals and responsibilities as a way to talk about delaying potential risky activities.
• Offer to talk about emotions.
• Encourage your teen to problem solve.

Older teens are figuring out how to feel at home in their body (gender congruence).

SEXUAL DEVELOPMENT

Many teens will experience sexual and sensual feelings and may desire to be physically intimate with others in some way. This is a very new territory for them making it exciting, and sometimes scary.

Please don’t panic! Physical intimacy can mean just wanting to be physically close to someone they like, holding hands, or kissing. Some people may feel pressure to engage in more intimate sexual behaviors; that’s why your relationship with your young person, and your ability to communicate with them, is so important! Communicating with your young person can help them make healthier decisions and delay sexual activity.

Access to social media and other media outlets give teens ample material to compare themselves to society’s “ideals” – the images of people who are held up as beautiful, handsome, or sexy. The flood of media images and the increased desire to be attractive can lead teens to make impulsive decisions regarding relationships and sexual activity. However, the good news is that as a supportive adult, you have the opportunity to help them navigate these times in their lives through open discussion. Remember, having an adult that supports them is a key protective factor for young people.

The information in this chart shows some typical developmental changes of middle adolescence (15-18-year-olds), what teenagers might see, and how you might support your young person. It is important not to assume anything about your youth’s gender identity or sexual orientation. Other sections of the guide will explore more ways to support your young person.

PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT

Your child will continue to grow and mature physically and may start to focus more on cultivating an attractive physical appearance. They may begin working out or changing their eating habits. Make sure they are making healthy choices and getting sleep.

For transgender, non-binary, and gender diverse young people, physical changes of puberty may have been troubling.

While people think of middle school as the years of growth, the journey from 14-18 is full of changes as well. The teen who you drop off at school freshman year is not the same one who walks across the stage at graduation.

SOCIAL & EMOTIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Part of the work of being a teenager is to develop values, begin thinking about their long-term future, and determine what makes a good partner. Teens may roll their eyes at you, disagree with you, and push boundaries, but they are also watching you for clues about your values. Having open, clear discussions about what you value and modeling positive behavior is key at this stage in their lives.

While many of the social and emotional changes that a young person experiences are influenced by brain development and hormones, they are also influenced by social and cultural expectations about what it means to “be a man” and what it means to “be a woman.” However, no one person ever fits neatly into these definitions. Now, more than ever, young people are striving to be their unique selves, and they may desire to be physically intimate with others in some way.

Part of the work of being a teenager is to develop values, and gettng sleep.

This is very new territory for them making it exciting, and sometimes scary.

Please don’t panic! Physical intimacy can mean just wanting to be physically close to someone they like, holding hands, or kissing. Some people may feel pressure to engage in more intimate sexual behaviors; that’s why your relationship with your young person, and your ability to communicate with them, is so important! Communicating with your young person can help them make healthier decisions and delay sexual activity.

Access to social media and other media outlets give teens ample material to compare themselves to society’s “ideals” – the images of people who are held up as beautiful, handsome, or sexy. The flood of media images and the increased desire to be attractive can lead teens to make impulsive decisions regarding relationships and sexual activity. However, the good news is that as a supportive adult, you have the opportunity to help them navigate these times in their lives through open discussion. Remember, having an adult that supports them is a key protective factor for young people.

The information in this chart shows some typical developmental changes of middle adolescence (15-18-year-olds), what teenagers might see, and how you might support your young person. It is important not to assume anything about your youth’s gender identity or sexual orientation. Other sections of the guide will explore more ways to support your young person.

For transgender, non-binary, and gender diverse young people, physical changes of puberty may have been troubling.
Gender Identity and Sexuality

Teens are wondering, “Who am I?” Discovering their own sexual orientation and gender identity are part of the answer to that question. This can be scary because fitting in and peer acceptance are so important at this age. Teens face pressure from peers and society and need unconditional love and support from parents/caregivers to make healthy decisions.

It may seem strange, but science now shows us that sex and gender are more complex than many of us were taught. Everyone has a gender identity and sexual orientation.

Talking about these topics with your child will show them that you believe all people deserve respect and compassion.

SEX & SEX ASSIGNED AT BIRTH

Sex refers to people’s biology – their external genitalia, internal reproductive organs, chromosomes, and hormonal makeup. “Sex assigned at birth” refers to the labeling of a person as “male” or “female” by looking at their external appearance to determine gender identity.

Gender identity is different than sex because gender doesn’t have to do with a person’s body parts, it’s about how someone feels on the inside. Sometimes gender identity can correspond with sex assigned at birth and sometimes it can differ.

GENDER IDENTITY

Gender identity is a person’s innermost sense of being a boy or a girl, or something in between—or outside of—those simple categories like boy/man or girl/woman. There are many gender identities. Gender identity is different than sex because gender doesn’t have to do with a person’s body parts, it’s about how someone feels on the inside. Sometimes gender identity can correspond with sex assigned at birth and sometimes it can differ.

SOME LANGUAGE USED TO DESCRIBE GENDER IDENTITY:

- Cisgender: Someone whose sex assigned at birth (male or female) matches their gender, or how they identify (boy or girl). For example, a person assigned male at birth who identifies as a girl is a cisgender girl.
- Transgender: Someone whose sex assigned at birth differs from their gender. For example, a person assigned female at birth who identifies as a boy is a transgender boy.
- Non-Binary: Someone whose gender identity doesn’t fit into simple categories like boy/man or girl/woman.
- Intersex: Someone who has genitals that don’t easily fit into the typical male or female categories: this is called intersex. Some health care providers will decide to assign intersex babies as male or female. However, we now know that there are more than two clearly-defined biological sexes. Remember this fact when talking to your children as it is an important way to emphasize respect for all bodies.
- Misgendering means referring to someone using language (especially pronouns) that does not correctly reflect their gender identity. This often happens when people use appearance to determine gender identity.
- Pronouns are a small but important way to support someone’s right to self-identify. Examples of pronouns include He/Him, She/Her, They/Them.
- Misgendering means referring to someone using language (especially pronouns) that does not correctly reflect their gender identity. This often happens when people use appearance to determine gender identity.

GENDER EXPRESSION

Gender expression is the way that people show and express their gender to the world. This is sometimes based on stereotypes and is usually conveyed through mannerisms, clothing, hairstyles, activities they enjoy, and how they talk. A few examples considered masculine gender expression are wearing a suit and tie, having facial hair, or playing with trucks. Some examples considered feminine gender expression are wearing makeup, wearing dresses, and taking dance classes. What is considered “masculine” or “feminine” is defined by society and culture and changes over time.

SEXUAL ORIENTATION

There are two different types of attraction: physical and emotional. It is common for people to experience both, it’s possible to experience one but not the other.

- Sexual attraction, or romantic attraction, is when someone finds the way a person looks to be attractive or sexually desirable.
- Emotional attraction, or romantic attraction, is finding another person’s personality attractive.

Some people only experience physical or romantic attraction towards people of one gender. Some people are attracted to multiple genders. And some people aren’t attracted to anyone! Who someone is physically and/or emotionally attracted to describes their sexual orientation.

Some examples of sexual orientations include:
- Gay: A man who is attracted to other men.
- Lesbian: A woman who is attracted to other women.
- Straight: A person who is attracted to the opposite gender.
- Bisexual: A person who is attracted to multiple genders.
- Asexual: A person who does not experience physical attraction toward anyone.

WHAT TO DO / START THE CONVERSATION:

- Try not to make assumptions about your child’s identity.
- Look for Moments in the Margins – use TV, celebrities, or current events to ask your child what they think.
- Ask your child what they know about gender and sexual orientation – they might educate you!
- Wonder aloud, “I wonder how it might feel to be treated differently because of your gender identity.”
- Express your disapproval of slurs or jokes based on gender or sexual orientation when you encounter them.
- Use your pronouns when you meet your child’s friends. It sends the message that you are open and accepting.
- Use gender inclusive language.
- Ex. “dating someone” vs. “boyfriend/girlfriend”

MORE TO CONSIDER:

- People’s gender identity, gender expression, and sexual orientation are not connected. For example, it is a mistake to assume that a boy who wears makeup is gay, or that a girl who prefers suits over dresses is lesbian.
- Do not label other people’s identities for them; let them decide for themselves.

IF YOUR CHILD COMES OUT AS LGBTQA+:

- Do not assume this is a phase but allow your child to evolve. It’s important for you to affirm your child’s identity now and to communicate to them that you will accept them even if their identity shifts over time.
- It’s extremely important that young people have a trusted adult in their life who they can turn to if they are questioning their identity. According to a study by the Trevor Project, LGBT youth who report having at least one accepting adult in their life are 40% less likely to attempt suicide.
- Protect your child’s privacy; let them decide who to tell.
As your young person moves through their teenage years, they are more and more likely to be interested in romantic relationships. Some, but not all, may also be interested in exploring sexual relationships. Some may never be interested in traditional romance. Wherever your young person lands, having conversations about how they deserve to be treated and how to treat others will help them have healthier, more fulfilling relationships as they grow and mature.

In older adolescents, as relationships may get more serious, these lessons are critical. Helping your young person learn about boundaries and consent before they begin dating can give them tools to have healthy relationships throughout their lives. However, it is never too late to start the discussion with your teen.

Many of us were taught to be polite and simply ignore their lives. However, it is never too late to start the discussion about how they deserve to be treated and how to treat others. Remind them to focus on whether the action will make them feel good about themselves.

Your teen should also understand all the components of consent.

Boundaries

Physical
- control over one’s body. Deciding who gets to touch, hug, or kiss you.

Mental
- expressing thoughts and opinions. The right to disagree.

Emotional
- private thoughts and feelings.

Consent
- allowing others to have what they want.

Boundaries and relationships:

Health

Encouraging healthy boundaries and helping your teen understand consent will help them establish and develop healthy relationships. Unfortunately, young people—whose brains and social-emotional skills are still developing—can make decisions that are not healthy.

Help your teen understand the components of healthy relationships, and the warning signs for those that are not.

Healthy relationships include,

- Personal space
- Equality
- Healthy conflict
- Open communication
- Trust
- Honesty
- Kindness, fun

Ask your high schooler for examples of what each of these characteristics might look or sound like in a romantic or sexual relationship.

Remind them that these characteristics are just as important in a good friendship as they are in sexual or romantic relationship.

Ending a relationship can be extremely hard in high school. Help your teen understand the components of healthy relationships and the warning signs for those that are not.

Moments in the Margins

Physical

- MUTUAL

Mental

- MUTUAL

Emotional

- MUTUAL

Just because someone consents to one activity, doesn’t mean they’ve consented to all activities. Before sexual activity escalates, there must be verbal consent.

What to know

Make sure your teen knows that no one should bully, coerce, or pressure them to do anything they don’t want to do. Sometimes peer pressure can make it difficult for your teen to determine what they really want to do. Remind them to focus on whether the action will make them feel good about themselves.

Red Flags

- lending or asking for money; sharing possessions.
- Material
- Consent
- Reversible.

Informed

- Expressing thoughts and opinions. The right to disagree.
- Equal communication
- Open communication
- Trust
- Honesty
- Kindness, fun
- Physical
- control over one’s body. Deciding who gets to touch, hug, or kiss you.
- Mental
- expressing thoughts and opinions. The right to disagree.
- Emotional
- private thoughts and feelings.

Consent
- allowing others to have what they want.

Boundaries

Physical
- control over one’s body. Deciding who gets to touch, hug, or kiss you.

Mental
- expressing thoughts and opinions. The right to disagree.

Emotional
- private thoughts and feelings.

Consent
- allowing others to have what they want.

Boundaries and relationships:

Health

Encouraging healthy boundaries and helping your teen understand consent will help them establish and develop healthy relationships. Unfortunately, young people—whose brains and social-emotional skills are still developing—can make decisions that are not healthy.

Help your teen understand the components of healthy relationships, and the warning signs for those that are not.

Healthy relationships include,

- Personal space
- Equality
- Healthy conflict
- Open communication
- Trust
- Honesty
- Kindness, fun

Ask your high schooler for examples of what each of these characteristics might look or sound like in a romantic or sexual relationship.

Remind them that these characteristics are just as important in a good friendship as they are in sexual or romantic relationship.

Ending a relationship can be extremely hard in high school. Help your teen understand the components of healthy relationships and the warning signs for those that are not.

Moments in the Margins

Physical

- MUTUAL

Mental

- MUTUAL

Emotional

- MUTUAL

Just because someone consents to one activity, doesn’t mean they’ve consented to all activities. Before sexual activity escalates, there must be verbal consent.

What to know

Make sure your teen knows that no one should bully, coerce, or pressure them to do anything they don’t want to do. Sometimes peer pressure can make it difficult for your teen to determine what they really want to do. Remind them to focus on whether the action will make them feel good about themselves.

Your teen should also understand all the components of consent.

Planned Parenthood

Freely given.
- No one should be pressured, coerced, or threatened to do what another person wants.
- Someone cannot legally give consent if they are under the influence.

Reversible.
- You get to change your mind. Without fear of repercussions or rejection.
- You get to say “no." There are no reasons why someone might say yes when they don’t really want to. If they are unsure about how their partner is feeling, they should stop and check in.

Informed.
- Informed consent means partners should share their STI status and whether they have other sexual partners.
- Make sure your teen knows that no one should belittle them, make them feel uncomfortable, or make them feel they have to do something they don’t want to do.

Enthusiastic.
- Consent is getting permission, so you treat people the way they want to be treated.

Some examples of boundaries include,

Material
- lending or asking for money; sharing possessions.

Emotional
- control over one’s body. Deciding who gets to touch, hug, or kiss you.

Mental
- expressing thoughts and opinions. The right to disagree.

Physical
- control over one’s body. Deciding who gets to touch, hug, or kiss you.

Consent
- allowing others to have what they want.

Boundaries

Physical
- control over one’s body. Deciding who gets to touch, hug, or kiss you.

Mental
- expressing thoughts and opinions. The right to disagree.

Emotional
- private thoughts and feelings.

Consent
- allowing others to have what they want.

Boundaries and relationships:

Health

Encouraging healthy boundaries and helping your teen understand consent will help them establish and develop healthy relationships. Unfortunately, young people—whose brains and social-emotional skills are still developing—can make decisions that are not healthy.

Help your teen understand the components of healthy relationships, and the warning signs for those that are not.

Healthy relationships include,

- Personal space
- Equality
- Healthy conflict
- Open communication
- Trust
- Honesty
- Kindness, fun

Ask your high schooler for examples of what each of these characteristics might look or sound like in a romantic or sexual relationship.

Remind them that these characteristics are just as important in a good friendship as they are in sexual or romantic relationship.

Ending a relationship can be extremely hard in high school. Help your teen understand the components of healthy relationships and the warning signs for those that are not.

Moments in the Margins

Physical

- MUTUAL

Mental

- MUTUAL

Emotional

- MUTUAL

Just because someone consents to one activity, doesn’t mean they’ve consented to all activities. Before sexual activity escalates, there must be verbal consent.

What to know

Make sure your teen knows that no one should bully, coerce, or pressure them to do anything they don’t want to do. Sometimes peer pressure can make it difficult for your teen to determine what they really want to do. Remind them to focus on whether the action will make them feel good about themselves.

Your teen should also understand all the components of consent.

Planned Parenthood

Freely given.
- No one should be pressured, coerced, or threatened to do what another person wants.
- Someone cannot legally give consent if they are under the influence.

Reversible.
- You get to change your mind. Without fear of repercussions or rejection.
- You get to say “no.” There are no reasons why someone might say yes when they don’t really want to. If they are unsure about how their partner is feeling, they should stop and check in.

Informed.
- Informed consent means partners should share their STI status and whether they have other sexual partners.
- Make sure your teen knows that no one should belittle them, make them feel uncomfortable, or make them feel they have to do something they don’t want to do.

Enthusiastic.
- Consent is getting permission, so you treat people the way they want to be treated.

Some examples of boundaries include,

Material
- lending or asking for money; sharing possessions.

Emotional
- control over one’s body. Deciding who gets to touch, hug, or kiss you.

Mental
- expressing thoughts and opinions. The right to disagree.

Physical
- control over one’s body. Deciding who gets to touch, hug, or kiss you.

Consent
- allowing others to have what they want.

Boundaries

Physical
- control over one’s body. Deciding who gets to touch, hug, or kiss you.

Mental
- expressing thoughts and opinions. The right to disagree.

Emotional
- private thoughts and feelings.
MORE TO CONSIDER
• Encourage your young person to trust their gut. If something doesn’t feel quite right, it probably isn’t.
• Allow your young person to say “no” to you. It’s good practice.
• They don’t need to defend their boundaries. A simple “no” with a brief explanation of what boundary is being crossed is plenty. Ex: “Please don’t touch me.”
• Parents, too should apologize when you cross your child’s boundaries. You are modeling good communication.
• Set a positive example of healthy boundary setting in your own life!

SHOULD YOU WORRY?
Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.

Unhealthy and abusive relationships take many forms. Your teen may not experience physical abuse, but that doesn’t necessarily mean that their relationship is healthy. Abuse can be not only physical, but also sexual, emotional, verbal, financial, or technological.

The key component in an abusive relationship is a power imbalance. One person has power over the other, whether due to age, social status, gender, sexual orientation, race, financial status, experience, or physical strength, and they use that power to control their partner. Being abused is never your teen’s fault.
Abstinence and Methods of Protection

Almost all people will eventually become sexually active. When people do choose to engage in sexual activity, it's important that they know how to communicate with their partner about protecting themselves. When we talk about birth control pills or condoms in the same way we talk about any aspect of health, we dispel some of the secrecy that surrounds sex. Giving factual information about sex and protection does not encourage young people to have sex. It helps them learn how to make smart and healthy choices for their body.

Share your values with your child. You can say something like, “While I hope you to wait a little longer to have sex, it’s important for you to have this knowledge so that you know how to stay safe.” This will let your child know where you stand AND that you are there to help.

All young people need to learn about abstinence, non-barrier methods, and barrier methods, regardless of their gender or sexual orientation.

WHAT TO KNOW

Abstinence
Abstinence means not engaging in any sexual activity involving someone else’s genitals (vaginal, anal, oral, or using hands) and is the most effective way to prevent the transmission of sexually transmitted infections (STIs) and unwanted pregnancy. It can also be a personal and healthy choice that someone can make for cultural, religious, or other reasons. You may prefer that your child practice abstinence. Help your child understand your values by explaining why this is important to you. However, your teenager may choose to become sexually active. You may be upset, but you can still help them stay healthy.

PROTECTION FROM PREGNANCY AND SEXUALLY TRANSMITTED INFECTIONS (STIs)
If people choose to have sex, there are many options to stay safe.

Non-Barrier Methods
Non-barrier methods are for anyone with ovaries and include medications (like “the pill”) and devices (like the IUD) that prevent pregnancy. They do not provide any protection against STIs. Non-barrier methods can only be accessed by visiting a doctor or clinic.

Emergency Contraception
Emergency contraception is used to prevent pregnancy after unprotected sex, if a condom breaks, or in cases of sexual assault. There are two types of emergency contraception: pills and the copper IUD. The pills are available over the counter at drug stores, and the IUD can be inserted by a health professional at many sexual health clinics or doctor’s offices. These must occur within a short time after the unprotected sex.

Barrier Methods
Barrier methods of contraception like condoms, latex dams, and latex gloves are used to prevent pregnancy and STIs. Barriers prevent the fluids of one person from getting into the body of another person. They can be purchased over the counter at drug stores and grocery stores and are often free at health centers and clinics.

WHAT TO DO / START THE CONVERSATION

• When you think of abstinence, what do you really mean? Abstinence from any and all touching? Abstinence for all time? Until a certain age? Ask your child what it means to them, and also share what you think.
• Be mindful of how you discuss abstinence so that your child doesn’t feel ashamed of what they choose to do with their body, but rather feels empowered to make the healthiest decision for their body.

Remember the Moments in the Margins
• Popular culture, advertising, and news can help make conversations about abstinence, sex, and protection easier. If a TV show has teenagers who are having sex or talking about sex, you can ask your teen if they talked about protection, or how the characters decided they had sex.
• Passing the contraception section while walking through the drug store, grocery store, or gas station can create a good conversation starter. Even if they roll their eyes, you showed you are open to the conversation.
• Respect your young person’s privacy and boundaries. If you ask them a direct, personal question such as, “are you having sex?” they might shut down.

MORE TO CONSIDER:
• Reflect on your values around sex and contraception. What messages do you really want to give? There are double standards that exist between genders about the ideas of sex, abstinence, and virginity -- boys are often praised for having sex, whereas girls are encouraged to remain abstinent and are criticized if they “lose their virginity.” How do these differences impact discussions of staying safe?
• In Illinois, minors between the ages of 12 and 17 can consent to medical treatment for STIs or to receive contraceptives. To find information about the laws in your state, view this chart.
• Minors of any age may purchase over-the-counter protection such as condoms.
One important aspect of keeping your young person safe is eliminating the shame and fear around Sexually Transmitted Infections (STIs). While no one wants an STI, contracting one does not make someone “dirty” or a bad person. STIs are more common than most people realize. According to the Centers for Disease Control, people ages 15-24 get STIs more than any other age group. Talking about STIs before your young person is sexually active will help them make safer decisions in the future. By discussing STI prevention like any other illness, you also help your young person feel more comfortable in talking to partners and getting help if they need it.

You may want to talk with your young person about what happens when they go to a clinic or doctor to be tested for STIs. Helping your child know what to expect and how to find a teen-friendly clinic will help them advocate for themselves and their partners in the future.

Testing for different STIs is available at walk-in clinics and many drug stores.

WHAT TO KNOW:
- STIs are transmitted through sex or intimate skin-to-skin contact.
- Like other infections STIs can be treated, and some can be completely cured with medication. However, left untreated, some can damage our health.
- Most STIs can be prevented by using a latex condom or latex square every time someone has vaginal, oral, or anal sex.
- You CANNOT tell if someone has an STI by looking. Some STIs have almost no symptoms. Regular testing is the only way to tell.
- Talking about STIs and getting tested are important parts of communication in a healthy relationship.
- In Illinois, young people over 12 years old have the right to confidential STI testing and treatment without the consent of a parent/guardian. If they need to get tested, they may ask for your help, ask another adult, or go alone.
- STI tests vary, depending on the STI being tested. It might involve a urine sample, vaginal or anal swab, blood draw, and/or mouth swab. If they test positive for any STIs, the provider can give them prescriptions for medication necessary for their treatment and may ask for names of sexual partners.

WHAT TO DO / STARTING THE CONVERSATION:
Talking about STIs might seem intimidating, but there are a few key moments when you can bring up the topic:
- Encourage your teen to feel comfortable asking their doctor questions about sex.
- Ask them what they know or what they have heard about STIs.
- Moments in the Margins:
  - When TV or music addresses sex, ask your teen, “What are some things that people need to think about before they engage in sexual activity?”
  - While in the car or taking a walk wonder aloud, “I wonder why 15-24 year-olds account for more than half of new STI infections.”
- As you continue to talk about healthy relationships and communication, remember that talking about STIs is an important part! Help them think about and practice communicating with a partner. Ex: “We should both be tested so that we are both safe.”

MORE TO CONSIDER:
- If your teen contracts an STI, it is essential to talk to them without judgement.
- When treated properly, people with non-curable STIs go on to live full, healthy lives with partners and children, if they want. For example, some treatments for HIV (PEP and PrEP) have decreased the incidence of transmission between partners.
Keep the Door Open

As a caregiver, you want to raise healthy, happy children. But it’s not always easy.

We are more likely to react when we are caught off guard, worried, or distracted. When we respond, we nurture the relationship with our young person so they will reach out to us when they need it most.

Here are some general tips for responding instead of reacting:

• Pause. Take a breath.
• Be the calm duck on the pond even if you are frantically “paddling” under the surface!
• Are you reacting emotionally? What are you reacting to?
• Saying something like, “Tell me more,” instead of, “What?!” will signal to your young person that you are concerned and interested.
• Really listen and ask questions – be curious!
• Try not to respond to the attitude or the eye rolling.
• If they come to you with a problem ask them, “What would you tell a friend?”
• Identify other safe adults your child can go to.
• It’s OK to say you’re uncomfortable or that you don’t have all the answers.
• Be open to learning together.

MORE TO KNOW

• Set boundaries that grow with your child. Think about social media use, curfew, giving them more choices.
• Try creating behavior agreements together instead of assigning hardline rules.
• Discuss your values as a family.
• Encourage risk-taking that is individual to your child (trying out for a team or speaking up in class).
• Help them to feel confident about their culture, racial, ethnic, or gender identity.

MOMENTS IN THE MARGINS

Instead of one lecture, find opportunities to have smaller conversations with your teen:

• The car is a private space where your teen doesn’t have to look at you but can hear what you have to say. Song lyrics during radio play also offer good entry points into conversations.
• Texting may be more comfortable than talking. While it may seem impersonal, it is an easy way to give your child the opportunity to talk without pressure.
• Use TV shows, movies, or social media to start conversations.
Resources

TALKING ABOUT SEX

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood, CDC – Teen Health Services and One-On-One Time with A Healthcare Provider
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Websites:
- Planned Parenthood
- CDC – “Teen Health Services and One-On-One Time with A Healthcare Provider
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE
- Videos:
  - Amaze.org - “Coming Out"
  - Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
  - Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

Videos:
- Amaze.org - “Coming Out"
- Planned Parenthood - “Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

AMYR TALKING ABOUT SEX

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood, CDC – Teen Health Services and One-On-One Time with A Healthcare Provider

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Websites:
- Planned Parenthood
- CDC – “Teen Health Services and One-On-One Time with A Healthcare Provider
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE
- Videos:
  - Amaze.org - “Coming Out"
  - Planned Parenthood - “Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
  - Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

Videos:
- Amaze.org - “Coming Out"
- Planned Parenthood - “Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

Planned Parenthood - “Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"

Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

ABSTINENCE & PROTECTION

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Apps: Real Talk

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Apps: Real Talk

Websites:
- Planned Parenthood
- Apps: Real Talk
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "Emergency Contraception"
  - Planned Parenthood - "Condom"

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "Emergency Contraception"
- Planned Parenthood - "Condom"

SEXUALLY TRANSMITTED INFECTIONS

Adults:
- Websites: CDC Fact Sheets
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "STD Prevention Beyond Condoms"

Youth:
- Websites: CDC Fact Sheets
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "STD Prevention Beyond Condoms"

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "STD Prevention Beyond Condoms"

BOUNDARIES & CONSENT RESOURCES

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood, Love Is Respect
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood, Love Is Respect
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
- Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
- Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

BOUNDARIES & CONSENT RESOURCES

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood, Love Is Respect
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood, Love Is Respect
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
- Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
- Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

SEX & SOCIAL MEDIA RESOURCES

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
  - Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
  - Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
- Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"

Spanish Resources

Amaze videos in Spanish

SEX TALKS
Planned Parenthood

ANATOMY & PUBERTY
Amaze.org

LGBTQIA+ GLAAD
Amaze.org - “Explicando la orientación sexual: lesbiana, gay, heterosexual y bisexual”
Samos Familia

ABSTINENCE/PROTECTION
ICAN (Select “Spanish” at bottom)
Planned Parenthood
Options
Amaze.org - “Anticonceptivos: condones, píldora y parche”

SEXUALLY TRANSMITTED INFECTIONS
CDC Adolescents and testing
CDC Fact Sheets

BOUNDARIES AND CONSENT
Planned Parenthood
Love Is Respect

SEX AND SOCIAL MEDIA
Common Sense Media
NetSmartz
Amaze.org - “Pornografía: ¿realidad o ficción?”
Amaze.org - “Sexteando: ¿Qué debes hacer?”

Sexual Health

- Planned Parenthood
- Love Is Respect

- Amaze.org - “Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex”
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

Resources

TALKING ABOUT SEX

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood, CDC – Teen Health Services and One-On-One Time with A Healthcare Provider
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Websites:
- Planned Parenthood
- CDC – “Teen Health Services and One-On-One Time with A Healthcare Provider
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE
- Videos:
  - Amaze.org - “Coming Out"
  - Planned Parenthood - “Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
  - Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

Videos:
- Amaze.org - “Coming Out"
- Planned Parenthood - “Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

ABSTINENCE & PROTECTION

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Apps: Real Talk

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Apps: Real Talk

Websites:
- Planned Parenthood
- Apps: Real Talk
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "Emergency Contraception"
  - Planned Parenthood - "Condom"

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "Emergency Contraception"
- Planned Parenthood - "Condom"

SEXUALLY TRANSMITTED INFECTIONS

Adults:
- Websites: CDC Fact Sheets
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "STD Prevention Beyond Condoms"

Youth:
- Websites: CDC Fact Sheets
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "STD Prevention Beyond Condoms"

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "STD Prevention Beyond Condoms"

BOUNDARIES & CONSENT RESOURCES

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood, Love Is Respect
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood, Love Is Respect
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
- Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
- Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

SEX & SOCIAL MEDIA RESOURCES

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
  - Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
  - Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "Condoms: How to Use Them Effectively"
- Planned Parenthood - "Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

Spanish Resources

Amaze videos in Spanish

SEX TALKS
Planned Parenthood

ANATOMY & PUBERTY
Amaze.org

LGBTQIA+ GLAAD
Amaze.org - “Explicando la orientación sexual: lesbiana, gay, heterosexual y bisexual”
Samos Familia

ABSTINENCE/PROTECTION
ICAN (Select “Spanish” at bottom)
Planned Parenthood
Options
Amaze.org - “Anticonceptivos: condones, píldora y parche”

SEXUALLY TRANSMITTED INFECTIONS
CDC Adolescents and testing
CDC Fact Sheets

BOUNDARIES AND CONSENT
Planned Parenthood
Love Is Respect

SEX AND SOCIAL MEDIA
Common Sense Media
NetSmartz
Amaze.org - “Pornografía: ¿realidad o ficción?”
Amaze.org - “Sexteando: ¿Qué debes hacer?”

Sexual Health

- Planned Parenthood
- Love Is Respect

- Amaze.org - “Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex”
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

Resources

TALKING ABOUT SEX

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood, CDC – Teen Health Services and One-On-One Time with A Healthcare Provider
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE

Websites:
- Planned Parenthood
- CDC – “Teen Health Services and One-On-One Time with A Healthcare Provider
- Apps: The SAHM App - THRIVE
- Videos:
  - Amaze.org - “Coming Out"
  - Planned Parenthood - “Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
  - Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

Videos:
- Amaze.org - “Coming Out"
- Planned Parenthood - “Parenting Tips: A Spill for Talking About Sex"
- Lurie Children's Hospital, “Never Fear” Talks

ABSTINENCE & PROTECTION

Adults:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Apps: Real Talk

Youth:
- Websites: Planned Parenthood
- Apps: Real Talk

Websites:
- Planned Parenthood
- Apps: Real Talk
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "Emergency Contraception"
  - Planned Parenthood - "Condom"

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "Emergency Contraception"
- Planned Parenthood - "Condom"

SEXUALLY TRANSMITTED INFECTIONS

Adults:
- Websites: CDC Fact Sheets
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "STD Prevention Beyond Condoms"

Youth:
- Websites: CDC Fact Sheets
- Videos:
  - Planned Parenthood - "STD Prevention Beyond Condoms"

Videos:
- Planned Parenthood - "STD Prevention Beyond Condoms"
This publication was supported by Cooperative Agreement number 6 NU87PS004311, funded by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Its contents are solely the responsibility of the authors and do not necessarily represent the official views of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention or the Department of Health and Human Services.
Response for Teens is part of the JCFS family of services. JCFS Chicago is a partner with the Jewish United Fund in serving our community. We embrace diversity. Our commitment to inclusivity is woven throughout our services, programs and welcoming workplace.