JVS CHICAGO'S CUSTODIAL TRAINING PROGRAM RECOGNIZED WITH BEST PRACTICE INITIATIVES AWARD
Young Adults With Disabilities Learning Job Skills Training

CHICAGO, Ill. – JVS Chicago's Youth Environmental Services (YES) custodial training program has received a Best Practice Initiatives Award from the Northern Suburban Special Education District (NSSED) Association of Parents and Staff.

The Best Practice Initiatives Awards are designed to showcase outstanding programs promoting understanding and inclusion of children with special needs throughout NSSED member-districts. One goal of the awards program is to share innovative and effective practices that are being implemented in local districts in order for other districts to replicate the same success in their schools.

Funded by a grant from the Workforce Board of Northern Cook County, the eight-week YES program offers a combination of classroom, on-the-job paid skills training and job placement for young adults with disabilities.

"The partnership between NSSED, School District 28, and the Workforce Board of Northern Cook County, has created the appropriate support and training necessary for young adults with disabilities to succeed in life," said Eric Kramp, Assistant Program Director of Community-Based Services at JVS.

Since the program's inception, 18 students have graduated from the YES program and have received not only transferable job skills, but have also developed a sense of commitment to their job. "I learned a lot of unique skills and it's been very beneficial to me," said Andrew DiNanno, a program graduate now working as a part-time custodian at Meadowbrook School. "I really enjoy working with the teachers and other staff members."

The next eight-week YES program will begin in June in Northbrook. Interested participants can call JVS at 312-502-6066.
